Nathan has been in the Australian lighting industry for 20 years, heading up ERCO's Oceania headquarters in North Sydney for the past thirteen. Nathan's engineering degree from QUT in 1992 eventually led him south to Sydney's northern beaches.

Nathan's role at ERCO sees him working on local and international projects, whilst overseeing the continued growth of the Oceania region, Nathan counts the adaptation of ERCO's 'light not luminaires' philosophy to the local market as his greatest challenge, and ideology that appears more accepted in the Museum and Gallery sector – not withstanding the advent of LED.

ERCO is an innovative leader in architectural lighting. The family business founded in 11934, and still based in Germany, now has over 60 offices and 1200 employees worldwide. Making good architecture even better through the right lighting is what we see as our cultural contribution, ERCO – the light factory.
